A Neighborhood Circus.

Several years ago I started a neighborhood circus, and it was such a success that it is now held in our yard every summer, the children preparing for it for days in advance. Acrobatic stunts, clown and animal tricks are planned and rehearsed, and something in the way of a pageant is put on, the girls making the costumes. The circus is held in the evening, and is always a big feature. I can guarantee that this amusement will absorb at least two or three weeks of the long vacation.

Movie Houses Must Pay for the Use of Copyrighted Music

By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—Moving picture theatre proprietors must pay music publishers a license fee for the privilege of having their copyrighted compositions played in film houses or suffer damages for infringement of copyrighted music, the United States District Court here ruled today.

The court approved the recommendations of Walter C. Jongschaas that each of the 31 motion picture proprietors in this city, named in a suit, be made to pay Irving Berlin and nine other music publishers $250 damages and $150 counsel fees in each case of infringement on their music.

Thousands See Fine Display Of Fireworks

Several thousand persons witnessed the fireworks display at Fayette field last night, marking the end of the day's celebration in honor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel by local Italians. The night program was a lavish one and the display included some of the latest stunts in night fireworks.

The only hitch in the program was the long delay in getting under way. Scheduled for 9 o'clock it was 10 o'clock before the first place was fired. The band played a number of selections, preceding and during the display.

The celebration began at 9 o'clock in the morning with mass at the St. Rita's Church on the West Side. Band concerts were played throughout the day. The evening program attracted a large crowd to the bandstand at the junction of First and Second streets.

Growth of Religious Instruction in Schools

"Ab" Soisson Enters Tennis Finals by Defeating George Hall in Two Straight Sets

Last Year's Champion Will Meet Winner of Dick-Pendleton Match.

JUNIOR FINALS READY

In the semi-finals in the upper frame of the tennis tournament being conducted by the Connellville Tennis Association, Albert Soisson yesterday afternoon defeated George Hall in straight sets, 6-2 6-2. This sends Soisson, who was the champion last season, into the finals.

Who the opponent of Soisson will be has not been determined yet. This will be the winner of the Red Pendleton-Edward Dick match. They did not play yesterday and expected to have their tilt today.

Hall, who has been going along at top form, did not play the game against Albert Soisson that he did play against Robert Horvick and Paul Soisson in disposing of them. The steady play of A. Soisson is disconcerting to a man who plays the bang-up style employed by Hall and when he endeavored to meet Soisson at his own game—playing them easy and soft—he drove many into the net. Hall lost most of his points on his own drive.

In the junior tournament the boys have advanced to the finals with Mott and Horner as the contenders for the pretty little cup and all the glory that goes with it. They will play today.

ALEXANDER, CAPSTAN TWIRLER, WINS 20TH VICTORY OF SEASON

The Capstan Independents went out to a batting rampage last evening at South Connellville and "Rube" Alexander, the glass blower's "nephew," chalked up his 20th consecutive victory of the year. "Rube" has yet to suffer a setback for this season. The glass blowers' outfit, the hard hitting Revere outfit by a 15 to 7 score in a five-inning contest, cut short by darkness. The game was slow throughout, consuming two hours and 10 minutes although the 11 to 9, the Bling hitters hit opportunistically and sent tallies over the pan, while Alex the great kept the hits well scattered. George Clawson sent another gill into the route, adding "just one more" homer to his list.

The Bling outfit opened up by sending three men across the pan, but this lead was short-lived as the glass blowers counted three in the initial frame and continued in the second with two markers. Revere hit Alexander for a quartet of runs and the Blingville's scored three more in the third inning. The visiting aggregation was quelled by Rube's pitching but the local outfit chalked four more in the fourth frame. The home outfit scored in every inning they batted.

Alex the Great was kept constantly wiping the sweat from his brow when the visitors opened up with the hitting rampage. Several remarkable pickups by the infield helped "Alex" in the pinches. He pitched more than excellently in the pinches. Hutchinson worked on the mound for the Revere outfit. He was generous enough to give three free tickets that later turned into tallies. He failed a whiff any of the glass blowers while Alex sent his total to 212, by breezing five more!

Macdonald Independents were scheduled to appear at the grounds, but Manager Percy was notified yesterday morning at 11 o'clock that the team had disbanded. Upon receipt of the news, he hurried until he got hold of an outfit to keep from disappointing the fans. Revere finally was obtaining at 2 o'clock and at 6 they made their appearance on the grounds. The glass blowers were on the grounds from 4 o'clock and were lacking the usual pep when the game began.

Of Interest to Fans.

"Ab" Soisson had been missed from the courts in the afternoons this summer and when he entered the journey it was not felt he would be such a formidable obstacle as last year. It develops however, that "Ab" had been getting up early in the morning and taking his workouts while the others were still in bed. He entered the scene of the tournament yesterday by defeating George Hall, who had been traveling along in whirlwind style.

"Rube" Harvick, president of the association, who has always been an active contender on the courts, was forced to eliminate himself this year because of a sore arm. At times it is painful for him to lift it to strike a ball.

When the local event is completed the players will turn their attention to later-city matches, several of which were played last season. The schedule will include Southdale, Uniontown and Brownsville.

Until today good weather has favored the tournament and no postponements have been necessary. The Divada Independents finally came through and won a game, topping Perryopolis 15 to 1 at the Dickerson Run grounds last evening. Adds and Steve Schomberg formed the Young Valley battery.

NO SIGN OF EARLY IMPROVEMENT IN THE STEEL TRADE

July Bookings Average Less Than 25 Per Cent of Capacity Old Orders Taking About 15 Per Cent.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Review will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows: Ideas entertained in the latter part of June, that the steel market was already as dull as it could be, have had to be modified. The market has been distinctly quieter than for this month and there is no sign indicating an early improvement. Some observers hold, on general principles, that improvement will begin at the middle of August.

In the steel trade as a whole, the bookings since July 1 have probably averaged less than 35 per cent of capacity. About 15 per cent of capacity is engaged on old business, including rails and freight car material, also the excess of fabricated steel bookings of a few months ago over the current bookings. Thus an operation of 35 to 40 per cent would be indicated, and mill operations are estimated to be running in that neighborhood, probably nearer 40 per cent than 35 per cent.

The official report of steel ingot production in June showed a tonnage of 74 per cent of estimated capacity, and with the rolling of steel practically made finished steel production was at about 65 per cent in the month, shipments being approximately the same. This is a better showing than was estimated at the time, and the point is important, illustrating a phenomenon observed occasionally in a dull spell of little undercurrenting their operations in their trade talk. Fear of their competitors becoming jealous and suspecting price cutting is presumably the underlying motive for this modesty.

Iron shapes and plates have been steadier in the past fortnight, large producers, including the principal eastern interests, quoting 215c, Pittsburgh, with $1 a ton concession on large fabrication and freight car building jobs. In a short time business is being done at the higher prices in the general price range. Pipe and the plate remain at prices over a year old, making quite a contrast with the declines in sheets and the heavy rolled products. The price structure will presumably be readjusted before there is any general buying movement.

Pig iron has reverted to dullness after its mild movement in June.

Iron League Sued For $10,000,000

A counter suit for $10,000,000 damages has been brought by the International Association of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers against the Iron League of New York. The league recently brought suit against the union for $5,000,000 charging that the strike, which started May 1, had caused a loss of $10,000,000, and asking an injunction to restrain the union from picketing or interfering with strike-breakers.

The Paramount

"THE DARLING OF THE RICH"—The leading attraction today at the Paramount, presents Betty Blythe in an interesting role.

In this picture Dorothy Farnum, the author, has skillfully woven a part which makes it possible for Miss Blythe to appear as a simple country girl; as a Washington Square shop girl; as a Goddess Juno, as Du Barry, and as Cleopatra. This is effected simply and plausibly by the fact that Miss Blythe, as the "Princess Thania Beakobsky," becomes the pet of society, the darling of the rich, and gives and attends affairs where she appears in the different characters.

Beauty is a rare thing, as poets have testified, and it is interesting to see Miss Blythe (that is, beauty) in the costumes of all ages. You all know, or rather have an idea of how Cleopatra appeared, but how would Cleopatra have looked dressed as a flapper? How would one of our modern stately beauties look dressed as Cleopatra? Miss Blythe gives the answer to this burning question in her latest picture.

Friday and Saturday, "The Wolf of Placer" will be shown.

The Soisson

"THE LONE WOLF"—Which opened today at the Soisson for a third day, presents Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt, two of the most popular screen stars, in the leading roles.

The story presents an opportunity to nearly every one of the players to give full swing to their great abilities. There is almost no limit to the entertainment appeals which the plot presents. To begin with, it is a detective story—which means it is chockful of suspense, and no wide-spread are its ramifications that the detective is introduced into the hidden mysteries of underworld life. He is introduced into the world of the underworld, of Paris, is taken for visits to haunts of the notorious French apaches, and, for desert, witnesses as thrilling an airplane battle as it would be humanly possible to picture on the screen.

The many fans to whom the charming Dorothy Dalton is always a delight are downcast when they see her consorting with the infamous Paris Pack, and unanimously breathe sighs of relief when finally she is revealed as a secret service agent and not a bob-tailed bandit after all. Similarly, Jack Holt's legion of admirers rejoice when he resolves to abandon the life of a bandit and "go straight," though he has been such a manly desperado—so genial even when revealing dangers of their pearl necklaces, that it has been difficult even to withhold sympathy from him.

The Orpheum

"THE DAWN OF TOMORROW"—With Jacqueline Logan in the leading role, presents splendid entertainment today at the Orpheum.

Sir Oliver Holt, one of the big men of England, is broken down with responsibilities and is told he will probably die in a month. Leaving word with his only living relative, his nephew, Arthur Holt, Sir Oliver disappears into the slums of London to relieve himself of a burden. A ragged little girl of the streets, Glad, prevents him from doing this. She takes him to her home, which she shares with other people of the streets, including "The Dandy," her burglar sweetheart. Sir Oliver becomes interested in them. He spends what money he has and then gives Dandy the key to his (Sir Oliver's) house, and sets, tending more money; the arrangement is that Dandy will give Sir Oliver half of his loot.

Dandy clashes with Arthur Holt in Sir Oliver's library, ties the latter to a chair, and robs the safe. The same night two of Dandy's pals commit a murder and blame it on him. Dandy cannot prove an alibi without the aid of Arthur Holt. Glad goes to Arthur's room to plead for her sweetheart. Arthur attacks her, Dandy bursts in and rescues her. But he is caught by the police.

At the critical moment, Sir Oliver appears and tells the truth about the whole matter. Restored to mental and physical health he returns to his former position, and Glad and Dandy are happy together.

Friday and Saturday Tom Mix will be seen in "North of Hudson Bay."

WALLACE BEERY

"UNSEEN HANDS"

NEED OF NATIONAL MACHINE REALIZED BY THE DEMOCRATS

One now that is why John W. Davis, the candidate, is thinking of advising a change in the Democratic form of organization. He realizes the burden will be too heavy for one man. There is too much ground to cover. Therefore, in addition to the national chairmen, yet to be chosen, there will be a sort of board of directors in touch with headquarters, with regional directors scattered throughout the country.

The Republicans adopted this form of organization in 1920 but are generally discarding it as unnecessary this year. Under the present plan one man has general supervision of the campaign in five or six adjacent states. Some of the Republican "best minds" were not satisfied with the scheme and felt that better results were to be obtained by leaving each state organization supreme in its own territory and subject only to the general "advice and consent" of the national committee and the candidate.

There is so much work to be done by the Democrats, however, that it is felt regional assistance not only is needed but will be welcomed by the unaging state machines.

Mr. Davis is going to call upon the "very best minds" of the party in each state. Prominent men like Governor Cox in Ohio are to be asked to lend a hand at the wheel and under their influence it is believed the state organizations can be revived for national duty.

Democrats are to be urged everywhere to put forth their best men for state offices this year so that the national ticket may have the benefit of every favoring local influence. In this connection great pressure is being brought to bear upon Al Smith to run for a third term as governor of New York. He is reluctant to do so. He feels he has given many of his best years to the state in various capacities and that it is time for him to resume his own business affairs so as to lay up something against the "proverbial rainy day." The Democrats are talking of "drafting" him, however, for no other man stands out for the place and certainly no other man could be of such enormous help to the national ticket.

The Democrats will endeavor to exercise as much care as the primary system will permit in selecting candidates for Congress, both house and senate. They want to get their full strength in the field. Mr. Davis is an organizer of no mean ability himself and his energy and directing force will be behind all of the aggressive campaign plans.

The MYSTERY ROAD

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"Tell me whether to play trumps or guarantee or roulette tonight, Gerald?" she said. "Or shall I go and play basketball? If only the people there weren't so alarming!"

Gerald looked across at Christopher. He seemed as though he had scarcely heard his sister's words.

"Did you see that?" he asked, in a low tone.

Christopher nodded.

"The girl is extraordinarily attractive," Mary murmured. "I really behave and call. Gerald! One doesn't do that sort of thing abroad, but she must be lonely. If they aren't what they should be, it won't hurt me."

"No good, old dear," Gerald groaned.

"I've suggested something of the sort already, but she only threw cold water on the idea."

Lady Mary laughed softly.

"After all," she decided, "there is something humorous in the situation."

"I always look upon Gerald as being the most womanish man I know. Quite a new experience for you, dear, isn't it? I can't think how you ever progressed so far as you have done."

"I should cheer up, old fellow," Christopher advised. "They won't hold out forever. You will probably find that tomorrow afternoon the young lady will shyly invite you in to meet her aunt."

"You don't know what you're talking about," Gerald growled. "There! Did you see that?"

Through the open doorway, Madame de Fontaine and her younger companion were plainly visible, making their way toward one of the roulette tables. They had come close to face for a moment with a little Frenchman, who stopped and bowed with every mark of respect. Both of the women acknowledged his salutation graciously. Gerald turned to his feet. "That's Henri, Dubois, Monsieur Blane's representative here," he explained. "He knows them! Thank heavens, I've come across some one at last who does!"

"He seemed the room in half a dozen strokes," Gerald accounted Monsieur Dubois in the private way leading to the Hotel de Paris. The usual civilities were exchanged.

"Monsieur Dubois, you can do me a favor," Gerald continued, as he drew him toward the bar and ordered two light brandies.

"It is possible, it is done," Dubois declared. "If it is impossible, it shall be done."

"I want you to tell me," Gerald continued, "who the two ladies in black were, to whom you just bowed—Madame and Mademoiselle de Fontaine, they call themselves. What on earth is the Frenchman looking at him in bland surprise."

"Mystery, mystery!" he repeated. "Is there one?"

"Look here, old fellow," Gerald said, "I will ask you one question, and one question only. What are their real names?"

Monsieur Dubois smiled. His difficulties were at an end.

"Mystery," he declared, "you wrong those very respectable ladies in imagining that they would present themselves here under names to which they had no right. Both ladies, who are, as you have doubtless surmised, related, are entitled to the name of De Fontaine. The first Christian name of the older lady is Anastasia, of the younger—Pauline. I am happy to be able to satisfy you. A thousand excuses. They call me from the banquet room."

Gerald returned delightedly to the room where his sister and Christopher were waiting expectantly.

"It appears that there is no mystery at all," he announced. "Dubois assures me that they are related and that their names are indeed De Fontaine."

Chapter VIII

Myrtle rose in the morning, as was her custom, at a little after seven o'clock, carefully made her bed, dressed, and walked for an hour upon the terrace. These early diurnal wanderings were tempered with a certain sadness, although she was always finding something beautiful in the air or some scene in the morning light to which she had been transported. To Myrtle, whose life as yet was composed mainly of externals, everything was beautiful. The sun warmed her with the promise of love. She was never tired of watching the little waves breaking upon the sandy strip, and the million scintillating lights upon the bay. She looked up with a glad smile at the silent hotel where Gerald was sleeping. Perhaps he was dreaming of her at that very moment. Love had crept into her life and found her very ignorant. As yet it was a beautiful and simple thing. That it was capable of change and division never even occurred to her. She loved Gerald and, although he sometimes disappointed her, it must be that Gerald loved her. She had few doubts about it all. His attitude often puzzled her, but she was down to her own lack of understanding. She was convinced that all would be well when she saw him, and she harbored a dull sense of resentment against Christopher, who she believed was always working for some unknown reason to keep them apart.

At half-past eight she returned to her room and deliberately attacked a great mass of sewing, which was sent to her daily from the hotel, and the manner for which she was responsible.

provided her with board and lodging. From that time onwards, she sat in the window with but one hope—the hope of seeing Gerald. Once or twice he had come and taken her out to luncheon, but Christopher was unflinching in his visits. He presented himself self every morning at about the same time, and even if Gerald appeared, he always accompanied him. Despite her resentment against him, it was always a pleasure to hear his firm tread and to watch his tall, broad-shouldered figure and good-humored, intelligent face as he crossed the room. She found an old-fashioned, but very comfortable, bed in the little cottage and generally looked in for a few minutes on her way to work. Annette, who was thoroughly French, was completely puzzled by the situation. She could account for it in her own mind only from the fact that the two young men were English and therefore presumably mad.

He Presented Himself Every Morning at About the Same Time.

"But how mademoiselle is industrious!" she exclaimed, looking in at the door soon after Myrtle had returned from her early morning walk and settled down to her sewing. "I hope my stingy old aunt pays you well for all that sewing."

"She gives me my board and lodging here," Myrtle replied, with a smile. "That more than contents me."

"Board and lodging! Oh, la, la!" Annette declared, sinking into her accustomed chair. "That would not content me. It is the tips from which one can buy one's clothes. It amazes me that mademoiselle does not ask Monsieur Dombey for some evening frocks and attend one of his supper parties. Charles, the head waiter, brings me news often of them. They are of the most amusing. There are artists there, and all manner of wonderful people. Has mademoiselle no curiosity to see life?"

Myrtle threaded a needle carefully before she replied.

"Monsieur Dombey," she said, "would I believe, take me, but Monsieur Christopher does not think it well that I go to those parties. He declares that they are for people whom I should not meet."

Annette clasped her hands behind the back of her head. She was vastly amused.

"Oh, la, la," she exclaimed. "That is so like Monsieur Bont! What does he make of life, that young man? Does he think it well for a girl as beautiful as mademoiselle to sit here alone at night and creep into bed, while Monsieur who adores her spends his time with other women? Pooh! Mademoiselle should have courage."

Myrtle laid down her work. Her heart was beating fast. She begged, "Tell me, Annette, she begged, 'who are these guests of Monsieur Dombey? Why do they keep me away from them?'"

"It is not Monsieur Dombey's fault," Annette declared. "He is a bean garcon, that. It is the stupid Monsieur Bont, who should have stayed at home in his own London. They are all well enough, these guests of Monsieur Dombey's. Some sing at the opera; others, perhaps, have seen life in Paris, but for that what are they the worse—what harm can they do? Oh, if I were mademoiselle, I should submit no longer!"

"What should you do, Annette?" Myrtle asked, half-fearfully.

"I should put on all my prettiest clothes," Annette replied, entering into the matter with animation, "and I should come to the hotel. I should find my way to Monsieur Dombey—that would be for me to arrange—and I should just tell him that I had come, that I was tired of being left at home. Then I would whisper one or two of the nicest little things I could think of into his ear, and I would put my arms around his neck, and—well—I would tell Monsieur Dombey—he would not send me away—not if I were mademoiselle."
